The use of Study Materials on Spiritual, Moral and Religious Education on the ASMRE website (Agora for Spiritual, Moral and Religious Education)

ALL materials on the site are freely available for study and educational use with no need for acknowledgment or permissions. Educators are also welcome to use any material for student study where this may be helpful.

Educators may use the site itself and or download any materials for their own teaching and study. Some segments may be relevant in professional development work.

The resources posted to this site have been developed from research and teaching Religious Education at university level for a number of years. What it reflects is a view of School Religious Education that has developed from extensive interaction with religious educators in university postgraduate programs and professional development programs.

The site tries to cover the nexus between theory and classroom practice.

The idea is to promote thinking and dialogue about key contemporary issues for Religious Education and to provide resources that will stimulate thinking.

Any comments and suggestions are welcome through emails.
